the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office of National Statistics 2000). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 15.5 million by 2020, and the number of people aged 75 and over to 8.5 million (Office of National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the UK. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out the government's commitment to improve the health and social care of older people. The strategy is based on the following principles:

- Older people should be able to live independently and actively in their own homes for as long as possible.
- Older people should be able to access the services and support they need to live well.
- Older people should be able to participate in decisions about their care and support.
- Older people should be able to live in a safe and secure environment.

The strategy also sets out a number of key objectives, including: to improve the health and social care of older people; to ensure that older people are able to live independently and actively in their own homes; to ensure that older people are able to access the services and support they need; to ensure that older people are able to participate in decisions about their care and support; and to ensure that older people are able to live in a safe and secure environment.

The strategy is a key document for the UK government, and it sets out the government's commitment to improve the health and social care of older people. It is a document that is of great importance to older people and their families, and it is a document that is of great importance to the UK government.
