FEDERAL ELECTION COMMISSION
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20463

New Best Efforts Rules[1]

The Commission approved revisions to the "best efforts" rules on October 21. The new rules are not yet effective; the agency will announce the effective date once the rules have been before Congress 30 legislative days.[2]

Political committees and their treasurers must exercise "best efforts" to obtain, maintain and report the identification[3] of individuals who contribute more than $200 in a calendar year. If they fail to disclose contributor information, but can demonstrate that they made "best efforts" to obtain it, they will be in compliance with the law. 11 CFR 104.7. The revised rules clarify the steps that must be taken to demonstrate "best efforts":

1. Requesting contributor information in the initial solicitation;
2. Making a follow-up request (if necessary);
3. Reporting the information; and
4. Filing amendments to disclose previously unreported information.

The regulations and their explanation and justification were published in the Federal Register on October 27 (58 FR 57725).

Solicitations

Under the new rules, committees must include in each solicitation a clear and conspicuous request for the identification of contributors who give more than $200 per calendar year. That request must contain the following statement:

Federal law requires political committees to report the name, mailing address, occupation and name of employer for each individual whose contributions aggregate in excess of $200 in a calendar year.

The request will not be considered "clear and conspicuous" if it is illegible or smaller than the text of the solicitation and response materials or if it is placed where it may be easily overlooked.

Follow-up Request

If a committee receives a contribution that exceeds the $200 threshold but lacks contributor identification, the treasurer must—within 30 days—make an additional written or oral request for the information. That request may not include an additional solicitation or material on any other subject. It may, however, thank the contributor for his/her donation. Written requests must include a pre-addressed return post card or envelope for the contributor's response.

Reporting

Committees must, of course, disclose on their FEC reports the information provided by each contributor. Under the new rules, committee treasurers must also disclose information that was not provided by the contributor, but is available in the committee's records for that two-year election cycle, including its contributor records, fundraising records and previous reports.

Filing Amendments

If a committee receives contributor information after the contributions have been reported, the committee must either:

- Submit with its next report, an amended memo Schedule A listing all the contributions for which additional information was received during that reporting period; or
- File, on or before the next reporting date, amendments to the previous reports on which the contributions were originally disclosed.

Under either option, committees should cross reference the new information to the specific reports and entries that are being amended. Committees need only amend the information pertaining to contributions received during the current two-year election cycle.
