I apologize for the delay.

TOMPAC does has limited administrative expenses. TOMPAC does not have employees but retains consultants. The fee paid to consultants covers administrative costs that would normally be incurred. Therefore, TOMPAC does not incur normal administrative operating costs of rent, utilities, telephone service, office equipment and office supplies.

Those administrative operating costs are the responsibility of the consultant.

I am paid as a consultant, and I work out of my home and do not incur additional rent, utilities, and phone service, costs.

I hope this answers your questions adequately.

In summary, TOMPAC has llimited administrative expenses, because they retain consultants who have the responsibility of paying these costs as part of their fee.
