The diagram shows a three-layered structure. The central layer consists of a horizontal row of 10 small squares. Above and below this central row are two additional layers, each also consisting of a horizontal row of 10 small squares. The top and bottom layers are offset to the right relative to the central layer, such that their left edges align with the right edge of the central layer's first square. This creates a staggered, brick-like pattern.

A diagram of a rectangular frame structure. It consists of two horizontal members (top and bottom) and ten vertical members. The vertical members are arranged in two rows of five, with each row having a member at each of the four corners and one in the middle of each of the two long sides. This configuration results in a total of 12 members.
